

^{The book} Now about Brahe & Flip - It was originally called "The Book of Brahe". It is now published under the title of "Adventures of Brahe & Flip", & if you can order it at any newsagent - or get it straight from the publishers. I haven't my files here so cannot remember if the book about Hop, Skip & Jump is published under its old title of "The Book of Brahe" or whether it has a new one - but Neams, the publishers, can easily tell you, if you ask them. I think it is called "The Book of Brahe". They were the first book I ever wrote - in fact one of them was planned when I was a school girl!
 It was very nice to hear from you - please give the children my love & tell them I will write them another Noddy book.
 Yours sincerely
 Enid Blyton

Autograph letter signed, 'Enid Blyton', Green Hedges letterhead, 21 June, no year, circa 1950s, to Mr Howe, thanking him for his letter and glad that he likes her magazine, 'It is meant for children up to the early teen-ages, and therefore you will find stories for both the younger and older children (but the younger ones love the stories too!!). I am glad the small daughters like our very English little Noddy - he is gradually ousting the very American Disney characters, which are not very suitable for our British youngsters', hoping he can take the children to the Noddy and Toyland pantomime, also mentioning Binca and Flip, Hop, Skip and Jump, etc., letterhead address struck through and address of Grand Hotel, Swanage, Dorset written by Blyton beneath, two pages, 8vo
